

Secondary English Reading Skills course

In order to pass or achieve the higher grades at IGCSE and IB, students need a range of sophisticated first language level reading skills in both English language and English literature. They also need to be able to write about what they have read, using evidence and analytical skills. These skills should be developed in the years leading up to the examination year, between the ages of 11 and 15.

This course will give learners an opportunity to understand what these skills are, and to experiment with applying them to a wide range of engaging texts from both non-fiction and literature. By the end of the course, students will have a full set of reading strategies which they can apply to any text, and feel confident writing about what they have read.

The texts and skills included on this course meet the requirements for both IGCSE and IB MYB expectations. Students will read non-fiction prose extracts, including biography, travel writing, media texts, prose extracts, a short story, poetry, and an extract from a Shakespeare play.

Skills covered:

- use a repertoire of reading strategies to analyse and explore different layers of meaning within texts
- analyse and respond to the range of ideas and differing viewpoints, purposes and themes in a variety of texts
- develop interpretations of texts, supporting points with detailed textual evidence
- discuss their own and others' reading, take account of others' views of what they have read, and express informed opinions
- analyse how texts are shaped by audiences' preferences and opinions
- Consider historical and social context when reading
- develop a clear understanding and analyse the ways in which writers use language, form and structure
